

ABSTRACT

An optomechanical switch comprised of light or laser movable liquid crystal is disclosed. The optomechanical switch consists of a plate of light movable liquid crystal rotatably disposed with respect to a substrate. When activated with a light or laser 5 source, the light movable liquid crystal is rotated angularly to create transmissive and reflective states of transmission for the optical beam.